NOAA Fisheries Southwest and Northwest Regions collaborated to write this report. Shirley Witalis from the Southwest Region Sacramento office, and from the Northwest Region, Lance Kruzic from the Roseburg, Oregon office, Tim Tynan from the Lacey, Washington office, Herb Pollard and Debbie Martin from the Boise, Idaho office, and Rich Turner, Kris Petersen, Mike Delarm, Allyson Ouzts, Rob Walton, and Rob Jones from the Portland, Oregon office were primary authors of the report.

Joyce Howard and Paul LeBaron worked tirelessly to format and edit the report in the short time that was available.

The report also benefited from insights and feedback provided by Dr. Scott Rumsey from the Northwest Region Protected Resources Division.

Robert Bayley from the Northwest Region Salmon Recovery Division oversaw organization and preparation of the report for distribution.

C.J. Joyce from the Salmon Recovery Division pulled together technical information for the report.

Salmon Recovery Branch Chief Elizabeth Gaar contributed greatly to shaping the report and Northwest Region Area Recovery Coordinators Elizabeth Babcock, Rosemary Furfey, Angela Somma, and Lynn Hatcher reviewed and provided valuable edits during drafting of the document.

We also are indebted to many of our colleagues including Bill Graeber for the NOAA Fisheries Habitat Conservation Division office in Lacey, Washington, Ken Currens from the Northwest Indian Fish Commission, and Kent Dimmit, Andy Appleby, and Bruce Sanford from the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife for providing and interpreting information used in the report.
